Apara Ekadashi Vrat Katha

In pristine times, there was a saintly king named Mahidhwaj. His younger brother, Vajra Dhvaj, had a sense of hatred towards his elder brother. So, one day he killed the king and buried his body under a Peepal tree in the woods. Due to the premature death, the soul of the king became a sprite and stayed on that very peepal tree. The spirit used to haunt every person passing through that path. One day, when a Rishi was passing by from there, he saw the spirit. He used his power to find the reason for his condition. He lowered the king's spirit from the tree and preached him about the afterlife. To free the spirit, the Rishi himself perform the Apara Ekadashi fast. On completion of the fast on the day of Dwadashi, he passed on its virtue to the spirit. With its power, the king's soul got free from spirit world and went to paradise.
